

Poppy Davis

Poppy Davis teaches and advises on agricultural business and policy issues affecting family-scale farmers and ranchers, related associations, and community efforts to support equitable and resilient food and farming systems.

She worked eight years at the USDA, most recently as the National Program Leader for Small Farms and Beginning Farmers and Ranchers.

Previously she was a California CPA with an emphasis in agricultural enterprises and non-profits. She holds a Juris Doctor from Drake University Law School, a Masters in Journalism from Georgetown, and a BS in Agricultural Economics from the University of California at Davis.
